LYNCH COULD NOT COME

Lynch Detained in Shawnee--Could Not Fill Appointment Here.

Shawnee, Okla., May 18.—J. Harvey Lynch, secretary of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor, was arrested yesterday on a charge of criminal libel, as result of articles appearing in the Union Messenger against C. N. Haskell, a candidate for the nomination for governor. Mr. Lynch immediately gave $250 bond for his appearance on June 17.

Secretary Lynch has been openly fighting Haskell ever since the campaign started, claiming that Haskell was an enemy to organized labor and publishing numerous articles in his paper to support his contentions.

Lynch claimed that Haskell formerly was a member of the Citizens' Alliance. This was at first denied and then admitted, but Haskell claimed that it was only for a few days and he introduced a resolution to break up the organization.

J. Harvey Lynch was billed quite extensively to speak in Ada this afternoon on the details of the Citizens' Alliance matter and more particularly on trying to defeat the candidacy of C. N. Haskell for governor. S. F. Baden of South McAlester, one of the state officers of the Federation of Labor, was here to look after Haskell's end of the matter, and make a speech. Lynch had the trouble at Shawnee yesterday and was unable to fill his appointment here. However, Mr. Baden reached Ada all right. He delivered a speech on Main street this afternoon to a large and enthusiastic meeting of voters. He is a fluent speaker.

and get views on the document.

We will take with us all the data in regard to the constitution and will submit the matter to the attorney general," said S. W. Hayes before the party left for Washington. "We will discuss with him the alleged defects and get views on the document, if it is possible to do so. So many different reports have been sent out from Washington, in regard to the attitude of the administration toward the constitution that it was deemed best for the convention to send representatives who could ascertain just what the situation is."

W. A. Ledbetter, chairman of the advisory board of the constitutional convention, is still against the idea of calling the convention together again at this time.

"It would be useless to attempt anything of the kind," said he. "We would be confronted by injunctions at every turn. Practically the only way out of the present difficulty is to wait until the supreme court has had a chance to pass on the matter and to straighten out the conflicting decisions handed down in regard to the election ordinance, by Judge Pancost and Judge Buford."

HASKELL CLUB

AT LOVELADY

Organized There Last Friday Night.

A Haskell club was organized last Friday night at Lovelady School house. At Lovelady there is the largest democratic club in the county, and every member who was present at the meeting Friday night pledged themselves for the support of C. N. Haskell of Muskogee in his race for gubernatorial honors, except one who was present who said that he was not ready to sign the roll. This is a strong movement for Haskell in this county.

The men go as the regularly accredited representatives of the constitutional convention, being dispatched on this mission by president William H. Murray.

It is still the opinion of the party leaders that it would be useless to re-convene the convention at this time

LET'S TRY IT AGAIN.

Why not another clean up day? We did not have a fair chance, Tuesday. The weather was not the most favorable, the time asked for general work—two hours—was too short, and sufficient pressure was not brought to bear for a general cessation of business.

If the federation of women's clubs will start this movement again and the mayor follow up with a proclamation of a half holiday—his modesty deterred him before—and some one will circulate an agreement asking all merchants to close, then the enterprise would probably be a signal success.

To make it succeed we must have at least a half-holiday so generally observed that one who does not take an interest in the work will run the gauntlet of unpleasant remarks.

It would help popularize the crusade if on that day people would dress up in rough outing attire with touches of the bizarre—coarse straw hats, jumpers, aprons, patriotic bunting, etc. Make it a sort of cleaning up street carnival.

Ada has an envious reputation for moral cleanliness. It must also be made physically clean. Let us not stop till we can boast of Ada, the immaculate.

THE PRINCIPAL THING.

"When the warm sunny days beam upon the corn and cotton after these long rains, you can see them grow, you can hear the corn stalks pop and hear rustling blades laugh. Have you got corn enough planted to feed everything?"

This timely query emanates from The National Co-operator and Farm Journal.

It is a question every farmer should ask himself every spring and keep constantly in mind in apportioning his land for crops.

If for any reason our cotton crop is short the increased price of the product will largely compensate for the shortage. One may safely assume so since the concerted action of farmers is reinstating the law of supply and demand. Cotton is our money crop and it's money the producer wants.

But no matter how much cotton a farmer raises, or how much he gets for it, if he has to buy high priced corn to feed himself and his hogs and his horses, prosperity can scarcely be his. Right now, with the new crop just struggling through the soil, there is in this section a lamentable lack of corn. The prospect is that during the summer much of the cereal will have to be shipped in here. That means hard cash going out—and a large portion of it to the railroads for exorbitant freight rates.

At least as far back as Pharaoh's and Joseph's time the world was taught an immortal lesson on the importance of having enough grain on hand. Upon the arrival of seed-planting time every year our farmers ought to take down the Bible and carefully read that remarkable story of how Joseph cornered the corn market and tided the world through fearful famine. Joseph simply planted a plenty and kept a plenty in reserve, and that's what every planter should do.

Pauls Valley has had a splendid clean-up day. It was a success because everybody caught the spirit of the enterprise. The wealthiest man in town put on a pair of old overalls and pitched into the work like the humblest laborer. The result is they made the town look as clean as if fresh swept with a broom. What our neighbor towns did Ada can do.

WHY THE CONSTITUTION SHOULD BE ADOPTED

After a careful and thoughtful study of the constitution prepared by the constitutional convention, and comparing it with the constitution of other states with which I am more or less familiar, I am of the opinion that we have a constitution that is safe, sound and conservative—one that will readily recommend itself to all honest and thoughtful men. Our interests are varied and our conditions peculiar, making the task of preparing a constitution an extremely difficult one. They were forced to meet a condition of affairs that was without precedent in the history of our nation.

That the work has been done honestly, faithfully and successfully is made clear to an unbiased and unprejudiced mind by a careful study of the instrument itself.

They have laid the foundation of a broad and liberal school system, which is by far the most far reaching and greatest safeguard to the stability and perpetuity of a free government. Our strength as a state will be in proportion to the intelligence and enlightenment of our citizenship and the only way to give all the people an opportunity for school advantages is through the public school system. Perhaps no constitution in the history of all the states has more carefully and successfully provided for every interest of the farmers and wage earners. This seems to have been the chief thought in the minds of the delegates, for it crops out in almost every subject touched upon in the document, but it is made more prominent in the questions of taxation, homestead and exemption and the initiative and referendum. In fact it is easy to read between the lines the old fundamental doctrine of democracy, that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The government is the people, for the people and by the people in theory, and it should be so in fact, and this constitution certainly carries out that proposition, and yet while it does that it does not destroy or even cripple legitimate business interest. It opens the way for safe investment of capital and offers encouragement and protection to honest and legitimate business enterprises. It says to the corporation, you shall have fair treatment, but if you say you have so much money, you must have that much. If you are organized to do a certain business that you must do and not something else. Your business must be open and above board, like all honest people. You can have pay for what you really do and no more, and you must bear your share of the expenses of the government, and it provides that the people can see that these things are faithfully done by electing men from among themselves to see that they are faithfully carried out.

It is a question every farmer should ask himself every spring and keep constantly in mind in apportioning his land for crops. If for any reason our cotton crop is short the increased price of the product will largely compensate for the shortage. One may safely assume so since the concerted action of farmers is reinstating the law of supply and demand. Cotton is our money crop and it's money the producer wants. But no matter how much cotton a farmer raises, or how much he gets for it, if he has to buy high priced corn to feed himself and his hogs and his horses, prosperity can scarcely be his. The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

BY JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPYRIGHT 1907 BY STORY-FRINGS CORPORATION

XX. Innocence Established.

Miss Carney was not at breakfast, nor did she show herself during the day, and my inquiries concerning her elicited the information that she was constantly with Miss Weston, whose condition had become truly alarming.

I wrote to John Carney, as his sister had asked me to do, telling him all that I knew of Miss Weston's condition and of her strange connection with the mystery of Carney-Croft which, for the first time, I recited to him in full. Moreover, on the bare chance that he might, through his previous intimacy with Miss Weston, be in possession of knowledge that would give me a clue if not actually explain the present inexplicable occurrences, I asked him to cable me immediately any facts that might help to clear up the situation and put me on the right track in my war against the Bruce woman and her allies.

I did this, hardly thinking that he could be of any material assistance to me in my investigations, but, rather than leave any stone unturned, I related in detail the events of the last few months, not omitting my experience of the morning in the little hill-side graveyard, and I closed by urging him most earnestly to return home by the first steamer.

This letter I posted at once, so that it would catch the next mail boat for England, and, to make sure that it would reach him promptly, I cabled to his bankers that an important letter was on its way and asked them to recall him at once to London if he was at any distant point.

When these matters were attended to I again set to work to organize a plan of campaign against the Bruce gang, and, as a preliminary step, I went into the village and made all the inquiries that I judiciously could concerning her and her character. To my surprise I found that she was respected and held in the highest esteem by the townspeople, and prominent in all the good work of the parish. Some of the people even said that she gave so much of her meager income to charity that she often suffered herself for the ordinary comforts of life.

As to Jenks, I could only learn that he was an honest, trustworthy fellow, that he was ardently devoted to the Widow Bruce, but, with it all, I could not find a soul to say a word against the character of either; unless Jenks' keenness in striking a bargain, and the businesslike way in which he brought home the intoxicated frequenters of Hoskins' hotel when they had the money for their fare, and left them to get home as best they could when they had not, could be laid up against him as a crime.

His own occasional potations seemed to be entirely overlooked by the townspeople in general, or else wholly unknown to them, and, taking everything into consideration, Jenks seemed to be regarded by the community as a pretty fair sort of a citizen.

With these facts in my mind I tried to reconcile the doings of the early morning, as well as the other happenings of which I was cognizant, with the reputations borne by Jenks and the Bruce woman, and I freely confess that I soon became completely bewildered.

It must be admitted that I had no positive assurance that the little graves up on the hill contained the bodies of infants, except that their general appearance suggested as much, and the fragments of bone that I had seen served as a mute witness of some ghastly crime.

MacArdel, too, had identified the odor of the rags beyond all question of doubt, at least as far as he was concerned, but it still must be remembered that I had not opened the parcel and that I had no way of knowing that it contained anything more than rags, as did the one that we had examined so carefully in the summer.

The more I thought of it the less I was able to make out of it, and, finally, as I had determined to take a walk, and was leaving the house for this purpose, my astonishment was increased by meeting the widow face to face in the hallway as I descended the stairs.

She was dressed neatly in freshly laundered calico, with an immaculate apron of generous proportions, and, in her hand, she held a tray with a cup and some plates on it. We gazed at each other for an instant and then I said, in an unconcerned tone as I could muster up for the occasion:

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Bruce. Do you remember me? I am Mr. Ware, you know."

"Oh, yes, sir," she replied, bowing pleasantly as she spoke, "I remember you very well indeed, sir."

I smiled at this in spite of myself and stopped her as she would have passed me and gone up the stairs.

"What are you doing here, Mrs. Bruce?" I asked. "I had no idea of meeting you in this way."

"Why you know, sir, I was a nurse in the old country, sir," she returned, in the same sweetly modulated voice that I had noticed before, "and when the young lady took so bad, sir, they sent for me to take care of her until the 'ospital nurses came from town."

"Who sent for you?" I continued curiously, again impeding her progress up the stairs.

"Miss Carney, of course," she rejoined. "She asked the rector and he recommended me most 'ighly, sir. You know I do most of the nursing in critical cases 'ereabouts, when I can find the time for it, sir."

She caught her breath at this last clause, as if she would have wished it unsaid, and blushed violently as I remarked: "You are very busy most of the time, I presume?"

"Yes, sir, I am, sir," she retorted, defiantly, "and my business is my own, sir, and it ill becomes outsiders to meddle with it!"

With these remarkable words she swept past me and proceeded to Miss Weston's room with all the importance of an idealized Sairy Gamp from whom the objectionable qualities had been eliminated.

As I watched her ascend the stairs with a little self-reliant poise to her head and a manner of absolute nonchalance, I came to the sudden and positive conclusion that the woman had not a bad trait in her makeup, and that the only way to deal with her was to approach her frankly and in all honesty of purpose. I was convinced, too, that Miss Weston had played no small part in persuading Miss Carney to send for her as a nurse, and I wondered how and through what sort of argument she had been induced to admit to her house a woman whom she had every reason to suspect of bearing her no great amount of good will.

From the housekeeper, who chanced to pass through the hall, I learned that the nurses from town were expected on the evening train, and that Mrs. Bruce would go home as soon as they arrived, and I determined to see her and talk with her that very night at her cottage.

Shortly after dinner, which, like all the other meals of the day, had been conspicuous by Miss Carney's absence, I again started out in the direction of the widow's house, and arrived just in time to find her and Jenks in heated arguments at the gate.

I slackened my pace as I saw them standing in the light of the doorway and, feeling that the circumstances warranted me in playing the part of eavesdropper, I stepped stealthily forward in the shadow of the shrubbery until I was within hearing distance.

"Well," Jenks was saying doggedly, "th' hull thing's about teh come out fore long an' ye might's well tell me naow an' hev done wit it!"

"I'll tell you when the time comes, Sam," she said, soothingly, and then she added something in a tone so low that I could not hear.

"Course I'll trust ye, Matilda," said Jenks earnestly and in evident response to her last remark. "Hain't I alius trusted ye frum th' start; an' got them pesky bundles fur ye, an' buried 'em, too, 'thout never askin' no questions? But I tell ye, Matilda, th' hull thing's comin' out fore long, an', what's more, that lawyer cuss wuz up on th' hill this mornin' right after we left, an' dug up th' last one we 'planted.'"

"What!" she gasped, seizing him by the arm, "did he open the parcel an see what was in it or—or take it away with him, Sam?"

"No," said the man, "he didn't do nuthin' to it, 'cept scratch th' dirt off th' top, an' when he got a whiff of it I guess it wuz all he wanted, fur when I seen him he was a-comin' down th' hill like th' old Nick wuz after him. I surmised what he'd been up to, an' so I went back an' covered it up again."

"Thank God for that," she murmured, "and you did not touch it or open it yourself, did you, Sam?" "No," he replied. "I jest left it lay, like you've alius told me to do, an' covered it up again 'thout askin' no questions, one way nor tother. But I tell ye, Matilda, it's all goin' teh be known fore long, an' I do wish yed tell me naow, fore it's too late."

"Yes!" I exclaimed, stepping suddenly before them, "and I wish you'd tell me, too, Mrs. Bruce."

They sprang back in amazement, and for an instant I thought that Jenks was going to strike at me, but I continued earnestly:

"I have come here as your friend to-night to ask and beg of you an explanation of this mystery that is upsetting the whole place. I know, Mrs. Bruce, that you can put everything to rights if you will, and I am prepared to do almost anything that you want me to if you will only make a clean breast of the whole business. I don't believe there's been any very great wrong on your part, Mrs. Bruce, although I must admit that I did think so at one time, and I want to say now that I am sincerely sorry for the manner in which Dr. MacArdel and I treated you both last summer."

They said nothing, and after pausing for a moment, I continued:

"As I say, I come here as a friend to ask you to explain this matter once and for all, or at least go away and leave us in peace."

"Oh, I can't go away, sir!" exclaimed Mrs. Bruce. "I can't do that, sir, whatever you ask, and I can't tell you anything, either, for the present, sir."

"Oh, nonsense!" I cried impatiently. "You can tell me just as well as not, and I give you my word that you can trust me in every way if you will only take the right view of this thing and side with me in helping to rid Carney-Croft of all further annoyance."

"No," she returned, weeping silently. "I can't tell you anything now, sir, although I say it with no disrespect. As you are a friend of Miss Carney and the other lady, don't ask it of me, I beg."

"The other lady?" I exclaimed in amazement, and with some sudden suspicion in my tone. "Do you mean to say that you don't remember her name when you know her well enough to have written her so many letters that she is perfectly familiar with your hand, and you have even had her here in your house?"

"Written her letters?" cried Mrs. Bruce in a bewildered tone. "Why, sir, I—"

Here she was interrupted by Jenks, who suddenly broke out into guffaws of uncontrollable mirth.

Mrs. Bruce eyed him in a puzzled way for a moment, as if she thought he had lost his mind and then, coming to my side, she drew my head toward her and whispered in my ear:

"In God's name, sir, trust me as you would yourself and ask no questions about the letters or anything else. Do this, for pity's sake, and for the sake of the sweet young lady you love."

He Had to Hurry.

A Colliers Weekly collector, late for his train and riding at a 1:55 gate through Main street, with his little satchel on a flat dray wagon, was the comical situation which confronted Ada citizens this morning as the collector tried to catch the south-bound Katy train. The shortness of the time between the arrival at the depot of the collector and the departure of the train would not permit us to interview him as to the comfort of riding in the dray wagon, but the best part of this story is that we saw him hand the dray man a fee of 10c—as a tip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Conn last night most pleasantly entertained the Forty-two club and a few friends. About thirty guests were present.

Progressive forty-two was indulged in and fifteen games were played, after which light refreshments were served. Pink and white were the colors predominating for the evening, the rooms being nicely decorated with these two colors. The sherbet served was of pink and white, as were also the carnations given the guests.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

LYNCH COULD NOT COME

Lynch Detained in Shawnee--Could Not Fill Appointment Here.

Shawnee, Okla., May 18.—I. Harvey Lynch, secretary of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor, was arrested yesterday on a charge of criminal libel, as result of articles appearing in the Union Messenger against C. N. Haskell, a candidate for the nomination for governor. Mr. Lynch immediately gave $250 bond for his appearance on June 17.

Secretary Lynch has been openly fighting Haskell ever since the campaign started, claiming that Haskell was an enemy to organized labor and publishing numerous articles in his paper to support his contentions.

Lynch claimed that Haskell formerly was a member of the Citizens Alliance. This was at first denied and then admitted, but Lynch claimed that it was only for a few days and he introduced a resolution to break up the organization.

I. Harvey Lynch was held quite extensively to speak in Ada this afternoon on the details of the Citizens Alliance matter and more particularly on trying to defeat the candidacy of C. N. Haskell for governor. S. I. Hudson of South McAlester, one of the trustees of the Federation of Labor, was expected to look after Lynch's end of the matter and make a speech. Lynch had the floor in Shawnee yesterday and was unable to fill his appointment here. However, Mr. Hudson reached Ada at night. He delivered a speech on Main street this afternoon to a large and enthusiastic meeting of voters. He is a fluent speaker.

and get views on the document. We will take with us all the data in regard to the constitution and will submit the matter to the attorney general, said S. W. Hayes before the party left for Washington. We will discuss with him the alleged defects and get views on the document if it is possible to do so. So many different reports have been sent out from Washington, in regard to the attitude of the administration toward the constitution that it was deemed best for the convention to send representatives who could ascertain just what the situation is.

W. A. Ledbetter, chairman of the advisory board of the constitutional convention is still against the idea of calling the convention together again at this time.

It would be useless to attempt anything of the kind, said he. We would be confronted by objections at every turn. Practically the only way but of the present difficulty is to wait until the supreme court has had a chance to pass on the matter and to straighten out the conflicting decisions. This has been done in regard to the election ordinance by Judge Piquet and Judge Buford.

HASKELL CLUB AT LOVELADY

Organized There Last Friday Night.

A Haskell club was organized last Friday night at Lovelady School house. At Lovelady there is the largest democratic club in the county and every member who was present at the meeting Friday night pledged themselves for the support of C. N. Haskell of Muskogee in his race for gubernatorial honors except one who was present who said that he was not ready to sign the roll. This is a strong movement for Haskell in this county.

LET'S TRY IT AGAIN.

Why not another clean up day? We did not have a fair chance Tuesday. The weather was not the most favorable. The time asked for general work—two hours—was too short and sufficient pressure was not brought to bear for a general cessation of business.

If the federation of women's clubs will start this movement again and the mayor follow up with a proclamation of a half holiday—his modesty deterred him before—and some one will circulate an agreement asking all merchants to close then the enterprise would probably be a signal success.

To make it succeed we must have at least a half holiday so generally observed that one who does not take an interest in the work will run the gauntlet of unpleasant remarks.

It would help popularize the cause if on that day people would dress up in rough outing attire with touches of the bizarre—coarse straw hats, jumpers, aprons, patriotic bunting, etc. Make it a sort of cleaning up street carnival.

Ada has in enviable reputation for moral cleanliness. It must also be made physically clean. Let us not stop till we can boast of Ada the immaculate.

THE PRINCIPAL THING

When the warm, sunshiny days beam upon the corn and cotton after those long rains you can see them grow. You can hear the corn stalks pop and hear rustling blades laugh. Have you not corn enough planted to feed everything?

This timely query emanates from The National Co-operator and Farm Journal.

It is a question every farmer should ask himself every spring and keep constantly in mind in apportioning his land and crops.

Let us reason our cotton crop is short. The increased price of the product will compensate for the shortage. On my side assume so since the concerted action of farmers is maintaining the law of supply and demand. Cotton is our money crop and it's money the product wants.

But no matter how much cotton a farmer raises or how much he gets for it, he has to buy high priced corn to feed himself and his horses and his horses' property can scarce be his. Right now with the new crop just struggling through the soil there is in this section a lamentable lack of corn. The prospect is that during the summer much of the cereal will have to be shipped in here. That means hard cash going out and a large portion of it to the railroads for exorbitant freight rates.

At least as far back as Pharaoh's and Joseph's time the world was taught an immortal lesson on the importance of having enough grain on hand. Upon the arrival of seed planting time every man of farmers ought to take down the Bible and carefully read that remarkable story of how Joseph corned the corn market and tided the world through fearful famine. Joseph simply planted a plenty and kept a plenty in reserve and that's what every planter should do.

Pauls Valley has had a splendid clean up day. It was a success because everybody caught the spirit of the enterprise. The wealthiest man in town put on a pair of old overalls and pitched into the work like the humblest laborer. The result is they made the town look as clean as if fresh swept with a broom. What our neighbor towns did Ada can do.

Owens did not accept the invitation to attend the big bridge opening at Chateau Furman was there and spoke. Owens must think he is a mighty big man since he decided there was not room enough in Chateau for him and Furman both.

Furman has em on the run.

Girls will smile through the years. Their eyes will always glitter with glee.

WHY THE CONSTITUTION SHOULD BE ADOPTED

After a careful and thoughtful study of the constitution prepared by the constitutional convention and comparing it with the constitution of other states with which I am more or less familiar I am of the opinion that we have a constitution that is safe, sound and conservative—one that will really commend itself to all honest and thoughtful men. Our interests are varied and our conditions peculiar making the task of preparing a constitution an extremely difficult one. They were forced to meet a condition of affairs that was without precedent in the history of our nation.

That the work has been done honestly, faithfully and successfully is made clear to an unbiased and unprejudiced mind by a careful study of the instrument itself.

They have laid the foundation of a broad and liberal school system which is by far the most far-reaching and greatest safeguard to the stability and perpetuity of a free government. Our strength as a state will be in proportion to the intelligence and enlightenment of our citizenship and the only way to give all the people an opportunity for school advantages is through the public school system. Perhaps no constitution in the history of all the states has more carefully and successfully provided for every interest of the farmers and wage earners. This seems to have been the chief thought in the minds of the delegates for it crops out in almost every subject touched upon in the document but it is made more prominent in the questions of taxation, homestead and exemption and the initiative and referendum. In fact it is easy to read between the lines the old fundamental doctrine of democracy that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The government is the people for the people and by the people in theory and it should be so in fact and this constitution certainly carries out that proposition and yet while it does that it does not destroy or even cripple legitimate business interest. It opens the way for safe investment of capital and offers encouragement and protection to honest and legitimate business enterprises. It says to the corporation you shall have fair treatment but if you say you have so much money you must have that much. If you are organized to do a certain business that you must do and not something else. Your business must be open and above board like all honest people. You can have pay for what you really do and no more and you must bear your share of the expenses of the government and it provides that the people can see that these things are faithfully done by electing men from among themselves to see that they are faithfully carried out.

It provides for an ample judiciary places the civil above the military and guarantees protection to all citizens alike from the humblest to the greatest of their life. Liberty and property and insures that the right of free speech shall never be abridged and must not be abused. I think this constitution should be adopted because the people need and are entitled to statehood and unless we get it now there would have to be radical changes in national affairs so this generation of people would never see it.

The document is worthy of your support. It commands itself to you from every view point and we owe it to ourselves and to our children to take this strong foundation of beautiful political masonry and erect thereon a sturdy broad and noble high and honorable one that will be the pride of the nation and a heritage we shall be proud to bequeath to future generations.—D. H. Finchbaugh, Atoka, T.

The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

BY JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPY RIGHT 1907 BY STORY & CO. CORPORATION

Innocence Established

Miss Carney was not at breakfast and did not show herself during the day and my inquiries concerning her elicited the information that she was constantly with Miss Weston whose condition had become truly alarming.

I wrote to John Carney as his sister had asked me to do telling him all that I knew of Miss Weston's condition and of her strange connection with the mystery of Carneycroft which for the first time I recited to him in full. Moreover on the bare chance that he might through his previous intimacy with Miss Weston be in possession of knowledge that would give me a clue if not actually explain the present inexplicable occurrences I asked him to cable me immediately any facts that might help to clear up the situation and put me on the right track in my war against the Bruce woman and her allies.

I did this, hardly thinking that he could be of any material assistance to me in my investigations but rather than leave any stone unturned I related in detail the events of the last few months not omitting my experience of the morning in the little hill side graveyard and I closed by urging him most earnestly to return home by the first steamer.

This letter I posted at once so that it would catch the next mail boat for England and to make sure that it would reach him promptly I cabled to his bankers that an important letter was on its way and asked them to recall him at once to London if he was at any distant point.

When these matters were attended to I again set to work to organize a plan of campaign against the Bruce gang and as a preliminary step I went into the village and made all the inquiries that I judiciously could.

I Stood Spell Bound with Fear

concerning her and her character. To my surprise I found that she was respected and held in the highest esteem by the townspeople and prominent in all the good work of the parish. Some of the people even said that she gave so much of her meager income to charity that she often suffered herself for the ordinary comforts of life.

As to Jenks I could only learn that he was an honest trustworthy fellow that he was ardently devoted to the Widow Bruce but with it all I could not find a soul to say a word against the character of either. Unless Jenks' keenness in striking a bargain and the businesslike way in which he brought some the intoxicated frequenters of Hoskins hotel when they left the money for their fare and left them to get home as best they could when they had not could be laid up against him as a crime.

His own occasional parsimony seemed to be entirely overlooked by the townspeople in general or else wholly unknown to them and taking everything into consideration Jenks seemed to be regarded by the community as a pretty fair sort of a citizen.

With these facts in my mind I tried to reconcile the doings of the early morning as well as the other happenings of which I was cognizant with the reputations borne by Jenks and the Bruce woman and I freely confess that I soon became completely bewildered.

It must be admitted that I had no positive assurance that the little graves up on the hill contained the bodies of infants except that their general appearance suggested as much and the fragments of bone that I had seen served as a mute witness of some ghastly crime.

MacArdel too had identified the odor of the rags beyond all question of doubt, at least as far as he was concerned but it still must be remembered that I had not opened the parcel and that I had no way of knowing that it contained anything more than rags as did the one that we had examined so carefully in the summer.

The more I thought of it the less was able to make out of it and finally as I had determined to take a walk and was leaving the house for this purpose my astonishment was increased by meeting the widow face to face in the hallway as I descended the stairs.

She was dressed neatly in freshly laundered calico with an immaculate apron of gingham. Her hair was in her hand she held a tray with a cup and some plates on it. We gazed at each other for an instant and then I said in an unconcerned tone as I could muster up for the occasion.

Good afternoon Mrs. Bruce. Do you remember me? I am Mr. Ware you know.

Oh yes sir she replied bowing pleasantly as she spoke. I remember you very well indeed sir.

I smiled at this in spite of myself and stopped her as she would have passed me and gone up the stairs.

What are you doing here Mrs. Bruce? I asked. I had no idea of meeting you in this way.

Why you know sir I was a nurse in the old country sir she returned in the same sweetly modulated voice that I had noticed before and when the young lady took so bad sir they sent for me to take care of her until the capital nurse came from town.

Who sent for you? I continued curiously again impeding her progress up the stairs.

Miss Carney of course she replied. She asked the doctor and he recommended me. I wish sir you knew I do most of the nursing in critical cases ereabouts when I can find the time for it sir.

She caught her breath at this last clause as if she would have wished it unsaid and blushed vividly as I remarked. You are very busy most of the time I presume?

Yes sir I am sir she retorted defiantly and my business is my own air and it all becomes outsiders to meddle with it.

With these remarkable words she swept past me and proceeded to Miss Weston's room with all the importance of an idealized fairy gump from whom the objectionable qualities had been eliminated.

As I watched her ascend the stairs with a little self-satisfied pose to her head and a manner of absolute nonchalance I came to the sudden and positive conclusion that the woman had not a bad trait in her make up and that the only way to deal with her was to approach her frankly and in all honesty of purpose. I was convinced too that Miss Weston had played no small part in persuading Miss Carney to seek for her as a nurse and I wondered how it had come about that she had admitted to her house a woman who she had every reason to suspect of bearing her no great amount of good will.

From the housekeeper who chanced to pass through the hall I learned that the nurses from town were expected on the evening train and that Mrs. Bruce would go home as soon as they arrived and I determined to see her and talk with her that very night at her cottage.

Shortly after dinner which like all the other meals of the day had been conspicuously by Miss Carney's absence I again started out in the direction of the widow's house and arrived just in time to find her and Jenks in heated arguments at the gate.

I slackened my pace as I saw them standing in the light of the doorway and feeling that the circumstances warranted me in playing the part of eavesdropper I stepped stealthily forward in the shadow of the shrubbery until I was within hearing distance.

Well Jenks was saying doggedly that the little things about the grave were for long an ye might's well tell me now an hev done wit it!

I'll tell you when the time comes Sam she said soothingly and then she added something in a tone so low that I could not hear.

Course I'll trust ye Matilda said Jenks earnestly and in evident response to her last remark. Haint I allus trusted ye from th start an got them pesky bundles fur ye an buried em too thaout never askin no questions? But I tell ye Matilda th hull things comin about fore long an what's more that lawyer cuss wur up on th hill this mornin right fore we left an dug up th last one ye lante!

What! she gasped seizing him by the arm did he open the parcel an see what was in it or—or take it away with him Sam?

"No" said the man he didn't do nothing to it cep't scratch th top an when he got a whiff of it I guess it wur all he wanted fur I seen him he was a comin down th hill like th old Nick wur after him. I surmised what he'd been up to an so I went back an covered it up again."

"Thank God for that," she murmured, "and you did not touch it."

or open it yourself, did you Sam?" "No," he replied. "I jest left it lay, like you've allus told me to do, an covered it up again thaout askin no questions, one way nor tother. But I tell ye, Matilda it's all goin teh bed tell me now fore its too late."

Yes! I exclaimed stepping suddenly before them and I wish you'd tell me too Mrs. Bruce. They sprang back in amazement, and for an instant I thought that Jenks was going to strike at me, but I continued earnestly.

I have come here as your friend tonight to ask and beg of you an explanation of this mystery that is upsetting the whole place. I know Mrs. Bruce that you can put everything to rights if you will and I am prepared to do almost anything that you want me to if you will only make a clean breast of the whole business. I don't believe there's been any very great wrong on your part Mrs. Bruce although I must admit that I did think so at one time and I want to say now that I am sincerely sorry for the manner in which Dr. MacArdel and I treated you both last summer.

They said nothing and after pausing for a moment I continued. As I say, I come here as a friend to ask you to explain this matter once and for all or at least go away and leave us in peace.

Oh I can't go away sir! exclaimed Mrs. Bruce. I can't do that sir whatever you ask and I can't tell you anything either for the present sir.

Oh nonsense! I cried impatiently. You can tell me just as well as not and I give you my word that you can trust me in every way if you will only take the right view of this thing and side with me in helping to rid Carneycroft of all further annoyance.

No she returned weeping silently. I can't tell you anything now sir, although I say it with no disrespect. As you are a friend of Miss Carney and the other lady don't ask it of me beg.

The other lady? I exclaimed in amazement and with some sudden suspicion in my tone. Do you mean to say that you don't remember her name when you know her well enough to have written her so many letters that she is perfectly familiar with your hand and you have even had her here in your house?

Written her letters? cried Mrs. Bruce in a bewildered tone. "Why, sir?"

Here she was interrupted by Jenks, who suddenly broke out into guffaws of uncontrollable mirth.

Mrs. Bruce eyed him in a puzzled way for a moment as if she thought he had lost his mind and then coming to my side she drew my head toward her and whispered in my ear.

In God's name sir trust me as you would yourself and ask no questions about the letters or anything else. Do this for pity's sake and for the sake of the sweet young lady you love.

LYNCH COULD NOT COME

Lynch Detained in Shawnee--Could Not Fill Appointment Here.

Shawnee, Okla., May 18.—J. Harvey Lynch, secretary of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor, was arrested yesterday on a charge of criminal libel, as result of articles appearing in the Union Messenger against C. N. Haskell, a candidate for the nomination for governor. Mr. Lynch immediately gave $250 bond for his appearance on June 17.

Secretary Lynch has been openly fighting Haskell ever since the campaign started, claiming that Haskell was an enemy to organized labor and publishing numerous articles in his paper to support his contentions.

Lynch claimed that Haskell formerly was a member of the Citizen's Alliance. This was at first denied and then admitted, but Haskell claimed that it was only for a few days and he introduced a resolution to break up the organization.

J. Harvey Lynch was billed quite extensively to speak in Ada this afternoon on the details of the Citizens' Alliance matter and more particularly on trying to defeat the candidacy of C. N. Haskell for governor. S. F. Boden of South McAlester, one of the state officers of the Federation of Labor, was here to look after Haskell's end of the matter and make a speech. Lynch had the trouble at Shawnee yesterday and was unable to fill his appointment here. However, Mr. Boden reached Ada all right. He delivered a speech on Main street this afternoon to a large and enthusiastic meeting of voters. He is a fluent speaker.

and get views on the document.

We will take with us all the data in regard to the constitution and will submit the matter to the attorney general," said S. W. Hayes before the party left for Washington. "We will discuss with him the alleged defects and get views on the document, if it is possible to do so. So many different reports have been sent out from Washington, in regard to the attitude of the administration toward the constitution that it was deemed best for the convention to send representatives who could ascertain just what the situation is."

W. A. Ledbetter, chairman of the advisory board of the constitutional convention, is still against the idea of calling the convention together again at this time.

"It would be useless to attempt anything of the kind," said he. "We would be confronted by injunctions at every turn. Practically the only way out of the present difficulty is to wait until the supreme court has had a chance to pass on the matter and to straighten out the conflicting decisions handed down in regard to the election ordinance, by Judge Pancost and Judge Buford."

HASKELL CLUB

AT LOVELADY

Organized There Last Friday Night.

A Haskell club was organized last Friday night at Lovelady School house. At Lovelady there is the largest democratic club in the county, and every member who was present at the meeting Friday night pledged themselves for the support of C. N. Haskell of Muskogee in his race for gubernatorial honors, except one who was present who said that he was not ready to sign the roll. This is a strong movement for Haskell in this county.

LET'S TRY IT AGAIN.

Why not another clean up day? We did not have a fair chance Tuesday. The weather was not the most favorable the time asked in general work—two hours—was too short and sufficient pressure was not brought to bear for a general cessation of business.

If the federation of women's clubs will start this movement again and the mayor follow up with a proclamation of a half holiday—his modesty deterred him before—and some one will circulate an agreement asking all merchants to close then the enterprise would probably be a signal success.

To make it succeed we must have at least a half holiday so generally observed that one who does not take an interest in the work will run the gauntlet of unpleasant remarks.

It would help popularize the cause if on that day people would dress up in rough outing attire with touches of the bizarre—coarse straw hats, jumpers, aprons, patriotic bunting, etc. Make it a sort of cleaning up street carnival.

Ada has an enviable reputation for moral cleanliness. It must also be made physically clean. Let us not stop till we can boast of Ada the immaculate.

THE PRINCIPAL THING

When the warm, sunshiny days beam upon the corn and cotton after these long rains you can see them grow up and beat the corn stalks pop and beat rustling blades laugh. Have you got corn enough planted to feed everything?

This timely query emanates from The National Cooperator and I am Journal.

It is a question every farmer should ask himself every spring and keep constantly in mind in apportioning his land to crops.

It is my reason our cotton crop is short. The increased price of the product will be a compensation for the shortage. On this safely assume so since the concerted action of farmers is reuniting the law of supply and demand. Cotton is our money crop and it is money the producer wants.

But no matter how much cotton a farmer raises or how much he gets for it, he has to buy high priced corn to feed himself and his hogs and his horses' prosperity can secure to be his. Right now with the new crop just struggling through the soil there is in this section a lamentable lack of corn. The prospect is that during the summer much of the cereal will have to be shipped in here. That means high cash going out—and a large portion of it to the railroads for exorbitant freight rates.

At least as far back as Pharaoh's and Joseph's time the world was taught an immortal lesson on the importance of having enough grain on hand. Upon the arrival of seed planting time every year our farmers ought to take down the Bible and carefully read that remarkable story of how Joseph corned the corn market and tided the world through fearful famine. Joseph simply planted a plenty and kept a plenty in reserve and that's what every planter should do.

Pauls Valley has had a splendid clean up day. It was a success because everybody caught the spirit of the enterprise. The wealthiest man in town put on a pair of old overalls and pitched into the work like the humblest laborer. The result is they made the town look as clean as if fresh swept with a broom. What our neighbor towns did Ada can do.

Owens did not accept the invitation to attend the big bridge opening at Chateau Furman was there and spoke. Owens must think he is a mighty big man since he decided there was not room enough in Chateau for him and Furman both.

WHY THE CONSTITUTION SHOULD BE ADOPTED

After a careful and thoughtful study of the constitution prepared by the constitutional convention and comparing it with the constitution of other states with which I am more or less familiar I am of the opinion that we have a constitution that is safe, sound and conservative—one that will readily commend itself to all honest and thoughtful men. Our interests are varied and our conditions peculiar making the task of preparing a constitution an extremely difficult one. They were forced to meet a condition of affairs that was without precedent in the history of our nation.

That the work has been done honestly, faithfully and successfully is made clear to an unbiased and unprejudiced mind by a careful study of the instrument itself.

They have laid the foundation of a broad and liberal school system which is by far the most far reaching and greatest safeguard to the stability and perpetuity of a free government. Our strength as a state will be in proportion to the intelligence and enlightenment of our citizenship and the only way to give all the people an opportunity for school advantages is through the public school system. Perhaps no constitution in the history of all the states has more carefully and successfully provided for every interest of the farmers and wage earners. This seems to have been the chief thought in the minds of the delegates for it crops out in almost every subject touched upon in the document but it is made more prominent in the questions of taxation, homestead and exemption and the initiative and referendum. In fact it is easy to read between the lines the old fundamental doctrine of democracy that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

The government is the people for the people and by the people in theory and it should be so in fact and this constitution certainly carries out that proposition and yet while it does that it does not destroy or even cripple legitimate business interest. It opens the way for safe investment of capital and offers encouragement and protection to honest and legitimate business enterprises. It says to the corporation you shall have fair treatment but if you say you have so much money you must have that much. If you are organized to do a certain business that you must do and not something else. Your business must be open and above board like all honest people. You can have pay for what you really do and no more and you must bear your share of the expenses of the government and it provides that the people can see that these things are faithfully done by electing men from among themselves to see that they are faithfully carried out.

It provides for an ample judiciary, places the civil above the military and guarantees protection to all citizens alike from the humblest to the greatest of their life liberty and property and insures that the right of free speech shall never be abridged and must not be abused. I think this constitution should be adopted because the people need and are entitled to statehood and unless we get it now there would have to be radical changes in national affairs or this generation of people would never see it.

The document is worthy of your support commends itself to you from every view point and we owe it to ourselves and to our children to take this strong foundation of beautiful political masonry and erect thereon a statute broad and noble high and honorable one that will be the pride of the nation and a heritage we shall be proud to bequeath to future generations.—D. H. Linebaugh Atoka, I. T.

The MYSTERY of CARNEYCROFT

BY JOSEPH BROWN COOKE COPY RIGHT 1927 BY STORY-1 CO. CORPORATION

Innocence Established

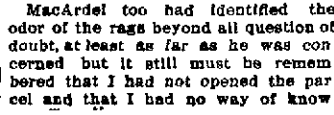

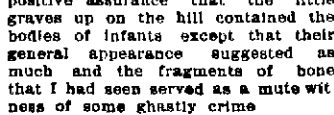

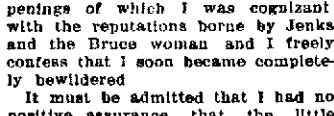

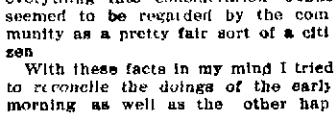

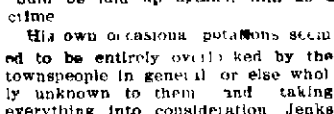

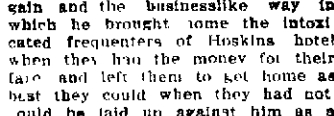

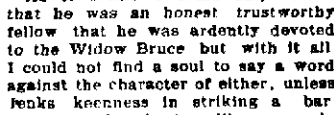

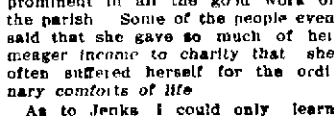

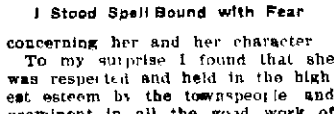

Miss Carney was not at breakfast and she showed herself during the day and my inquiries concerning her elicited the information that she was constantly with Miss Weston whose condition had become truly alarming.

I wrote to John Carney as his sister had asked me to do telling him all that I knew of Miss Weston's condition and of her strange connection with the mystery of Carney Croft which for the first time I related to him in full. Moreover on the bare chance that he might through his previous intimacy with Miss Weston be in possession of knowledge that would give me a clue if not actually explain the present inexplicable occurrences I asked him to cable me immediately any facts that might help to clear up the situation and put me on the right track in my war against the Bruce woman and her allies.

I did this, hardly thinking that he could be of any material assistance to me in my investigations but rather than leave any stone unturned I related in detail the events of the last few months not omitting my experience of the morning in the little hill side graveyard and I closed by urging him most earnestly to return home by the first steamer.

This letter I posted at once so that it would catch the next mail boat for England and to make sure that it would reach him promptly I cabled to his bankers that an important letter was on its way and asked them to recall him at once to London if he was at any distant point.

When these matters were attended to I again set to work to organize a plan of campaign against the Bruce gang and as a preliminary step I went into the village and made all the inquiries that I judiciously could.

that it contained anything more than jags as did the one that we had examined so carefully in the summer.

The more I thought of it the less was able to make out of it and finally as I had determined to take a look and was leaving the house for his purpose my astonishment was increased by meeting the widow face to face in the hallway as I descended the stairs.

She was dressed neatly in fresh laundered calico with an immaculate apron of gorgeous spotions and in her hand she held a tray with a cup and some plates on it. We gazed at each other for an instant and then I said in as unconcerned a tone as I could muster up for the occasion.

Good afternoon Mrs. Bruce. Do you remember me? I am Mr. Warren. You know.

Oh yes sir she replied bowing pleasantly as she spoke. I remember you very well indeed sir.

I smiled at this in spite of myself and stopped her as she would have passed me and gone up the stairs.

What are you doing here Mrs. Bruce? I asked. I had no idea of meeting you in this way.

Why you know sir I was a nurse in the old country sir she resumed in the same sweet modulated voice that I had noticed before and when the young lady took so bad she they sent for me to take care of her until the hospital nurses came from town.

Who sent for you? I continued curiously again impeding her progress up the stairs.

Miss Carney of course she rejoined. She asked the doctor and he recommended me to stay with you. You know I do most of the nursing in critical cases hereabouts when I can find the time for it sir.

She caught her breath at this last clause as if she would have wished it unsaid and blushed vividly as I remarked. You are very busy most of the time I presume?

Yes sir I am sir she retorted defiantly and my business is my own sir and it all becomes outsiders to meddle with it.

With these remarkable words she swept past me and proceeded to Miss Weston's room with all the importance of an idealized Sally Gump from whom the objectionable qualities had been eliminated.

As I watched her ascend the stairs with a little self-satisfied smile to her heel and a manner of absolute nonchalance I came to the sudden and positive conclusion that the woman had not a bad trait in her make up and that the only way to deal with her was to approach her frankly and in all honesty of purpose. I was convinced too that Miss Weston had placed no small part in persuading Miss Carney to stay for her as a nurse and I wondered how it had come about that she had admitted to her house a woman who might have every reason to suspect of bearing her no great amount of good will.

From the housekeeper who chanced to pass through the hall I learned that the nurses from town were expected on the evening train and that Mrs. Bruce would go home as soon as they arrived and I determined to see her and talk with her that very night at her cottage.

Shortly after dinner which like all the other meals of the day had been conspicuous by Miss Carney's absence I again started out in the direction of the widow's house and arrived just in time to find her and Jenks in heated arguments at the gate.

I slackened my pace as I saw them standing in the light of the doorway and feeling that the circumstances warranted me in playing the part of eavesdropper I stepped stealthily forward in the shadow of the shrubbery until I was within hearing distance.

Well Jenks was saying doggedly that hull things about teh come out fore long an ye might's well tell me naow an hev done wit it."

I'll tell you when the time comes Sam she said soothingly and then she added something in a tone so low that I could not hear.

Course I'll trust ye Matilda said Jenks earnestly and in evident response to her last remark. Hain't I allus trusted ye from th start an got them pesky bundles fur ye an buried em too thaout never askin no questions? But I tell ye Matilda th hull things a coun' aout fore long an whate more that lawyer cuss wur up on th hill this mornin right when we left in dug up th last one ye hain't I?

What she gasped seeing him by the arm did he open the parcel an see what was in it or—or take it away with him Sam?"

"No" said the man he didn't do nuthin to it cep't scratch th top off th top an when he got a whiff of it I guess it wur all he wanted fur when I seen him he was a coun' dawg th hull like th old Nick wur after him I surmised what he'd been up to an so I went back an covered it up again."

"Thank God for that," she murmured, "and you did not touch it."

or open it yourself, did you, Sam?" "No," he replied "I jest left it lay, like you've allus told me to do, an covered it up again thaout askin' no questions, one way nor tother. But I tell ye, Matilda it's all goin' teh be known fore long an I do wish yed tell me naow fore it's too late."

Yes! I exclaimed stepping suddenly before them and I wish you'd tell me too Mrs. Bruce. They sprang back in amazement, and for an instant I thought that Jenks was going to strike at me, but I continued earnestly.

I have come here as your friend to night to ask and beg of you an explanation of this mystery that is upsetting the whole place. I know Mrs. Bruce that you can put everything to rights if you will and I am prepared to do almost anything that you want me to if you will only made a clean breast of the whole business. I don't believe there's been any very great wrong on your part Mrs. Bruce although I must admit that I did think so at one time and I want to say now that I am sincerely sorry for the manner in which Dr. MacArdel and I treated you both last summer.

They said nothing and after pausing for a moment I continued. As I say, I come here as a friend to ask you to explain this matter once and for all or at least go away and leave us in peace.

Oh I can't go away sir! exclaimed Mrs. Bruce. I can't do that sir whatever you ask and I can't tell you anything either for the present sir.

Oh nonsense! I cried impatiently. You can tell me just as well as not and I give you my word that you can trust me in every way if you will only take the right view of this thing and side with me in helping to rid Carney Croft of all further annoyance.

No she returned weeping silently. I can't tell you anything now sir, although I say it with no disrespect. As you are a friend of Miss Carney and the other lady don't ask it of me I beg.

The other lady? I exclaimed in amazement and with some sudden suspicion in my tone. Do you mean to say that you don't remember her name when you know her well enough to have written her so many letters that she is perfectly familiar with your hand and you have even had her here in your house?

Written her letters? cried Mrs. Bruce in a bewildered tone. Why, sir?

Here she was interrupted by Jenks, who suddenly broke out into guffaws of uncontrollable mirth.

Mrs. Bruce eyed him in a puzzled way for a moment as if she thought he had lost his mind and then coming to my side she drew my head toward her and whispered in my ear.

In God's name sir trust me as you would yourself and ask no questions about the letters or anything else. Do this for pity's sake and for the sake of the sweet young lady you love.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure Send for circulars, free F J CHENEY & CO, Toledo, O.
